

Public School Scholar Confidentiality

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) is a federal law that protects the privacy interests of scholars. It affords parents the right to access and request their children's education records be amended, and gives them some control over the disclosure of the information in these records. FERPA generally prevents schools from sharing scholar records, or personally identifiable information in these records, without the written consent of a parent, except as provided by law. Capstone complies with all FERPA regulations and provides employee training regarding the confidentiality of scholar records annually.
